PARKS SPOTLIGHT

TALE OF THE TRAIL

By JAMES BRIGGS, Park Planner

Not long ago, there was a series of run-down gravel yards and pole barns along the railroad tracks north and south of Norman's downtown Main Street that were home to various garages, recycling and repair shops, and storage buildings full of leaky, broken cars and other machines that had long-outlived their usefulness. Before that, there was a modicum of useful trade happening up and down what is now the Burlington Northern Santa Fe Rail Line that strikes a diagonal line that splits the town into East and West Norman—everything from a lumber yard and livery stables to (later) a neighborhood gas station, a rendering plant, and even the old Rhodes Grain Silos (which were torn down just last year).

But somebody saw potential in this land, and after a sizeable investment by multiple groups, the Legacy Trail project came to pass. The origins of this wide, multi-use path date from the early 1990's. An OU planning professor named Bob Goins spent years working with the idea of renovating the unsightly railroad corridor into a park-like setting. In fact, the 1889 Original Town site of Norman was centered on the railroad; and the area around the Norman Train Depot was maintained as a city park (Edwards Park). It was a grand space that was the site of many turn-of-the-century parades, picnics and celebrations. However, Edwards Park became more of a lawn and less of a park over time.

So, with Goins leading the charge, the initial trail design was completed in 1996, and construction began in 1997. The old buildings were removed and a mile-long meandering trail was constructed—10 feet wide and lined with trees, pedestrian lighting and an irrigated landscape. Over time, various benches and sculptures were established along the trail, and the Santa Fe Depot was restored to its original glory to act as the Norman Station for the AMTRAK Heartland Flyer (a daily route connecting Oklahoma City and Fort Worth, Texas). Five historical sculpture plazas along the trail in the downtown area tell the tale of Norman—from pre-European settlement up to the state's centennial in 2007 (with a special stop along the way for the James Garner Plaza, where Norman's Favorite Son can forever keep an eye on the old Sooner Theatre across the street from him, at the corner of Main Street and the Trail).

The success of the original project inspired the construction of other segments of trail both north and south of the original mile of Legacy Trail. In 2013, the Parks and Recreation Department completed a "missing link" in this trail along Duffy Street from Jenkins over to Asp and then down Asp to Campus Corner. All of this is part of a plan to link Norman's major sites and events along a single, identifiable trail system, which uses the same paving, lighting and site furnishing details. With this just-completed section, the trail now stretches from Highway 9 & Chautauqua Street (by the Lloyd Noble Center), across the OU Campus, through Campus Corner and Downtown Norman, up to Robinson Street and then west to the University Town Center shopping area and over I-35, where it will end up at the Ruby Grant Community Park at Franklin Road & 36th Avenue Northwest. There are even plans to someday construct an extension that will head east along Highway 9 towards Lake Thunderbird.

All of this provides an alternative mode of transportation for those who would rather walk or bike; and that idea of getting out of your vehicle and reducing traffic and air pollution is a basic tenant of the Legacy Trail system. The Parks and Recreation Department has been a proud partner in this project, from its origins as downtown's Edwards Park to what is now Legacy Trail across the whole town.

RECREATION SPOTLIGHT

MORE THAN “JUST A DANCE”

By BARRY TRAMEL, NewsOK.com & Oklahoman Columnist

Some arrived in limos. Others arrived in pickup trucks. Some wore tuxedos and prom dresses. Others wore blue jeans and hair ribbons. Some danced the night away. Others basked in the splendor of a great party. Some preferred Disco. Others preferred Country.

But there was unanimity in countenance. Everyone wore a smile.

The annual Daddy Daughter Dance, sponsored by the Norman Parks and Recreation Department, is one of our city's finest traditions. It's a chance for fathers and daughters, ages four to infinity, to spend time together and deepen a bond and make memories to last a lifetime.

Last February, I made my Daddy Daughter Dance debut. My son-in-law was deployed with the Oklahoma National Guard, so I pulled pinch-hit duty, taking my six-year-old granddaughter, Riley, to the dance at the Embassy Suites. We had a fabulous time. Danced a lot, laughed a lot, ate a little, rubber-necked a little. Posed for photographs. Walked the Embassy hallways like we were the king and queen of the court. In general, just acted like we were out on the town. Which we were.

It was a chance for a grown man to relive a little of his youth, and the chance for a little girl to act a little grown up. A chance for busy men to take a breath and remember what's important. A chance to see people from all over town come together for the greatest of causes. To draw closer to the most precious thing in our lives. Our children.

You don't have to waltz or tango or two-step. You don't have to do the Mashed Potato or the Twist. You don't have to do the Moonwalk or the Macarena. You don't have to do the Watusi or the Hustle.

The dance is not about the dance. Just as playing catch with your son is not about the ball and the glove.

The Daddy/Daughter Dance is about daddies and daughters. This year, my son-in-law is back from Afghanistan and available to take Riley. But her sister Sadie turned four in November. She'll want to go. And I think she'll need a date.
